Marcia Healy
Librarian

This is Mrs. Healy's tenth year as St. Ambrose School librarian, following three years as the kindergarten aide. She was born in Mt. Vernon, Ohio, and received her Bachelor of Education degree from The University of Virginia. She taught second and third grades for eight years in Albemarle County, Virginia. When her sons were born, she retired and was a regular room mother and library volunteer through their elementary school careers.

Mrs. Healy and her husband of 35 years have been St. Ambrose parishioners for 25 years. Their oldest son is an engineer at Johns Hopkins Applied Physics Lab, and the youngest is working on a masters at Georgetown University and is an intern for the Washington Nationals. The newest addition to the family is a corgi puppy named Foxy.

Mrs. Healy's love for children's literature led her to the St. Ambrose library. She read to her boys daily when they were young, and is passionate about the importance of parents sharing books with their children every day. Her ideal day off is spent at Borders buying new books for the library. Now that her sons are reading on their own, Mrs. Healy spends more time quilting, cross stitching, and watching movies.
